HISTORICAL NOTE: Forerunners of the AFULE Federal Division were state Locomotive Enginemen's Associations, of which the 'Locomotive Engine Drivers' Association' was the first (1861) and only continuous union. Attempts to form a South Australian Enginemen's association failed in 1876 and 1880 due to conflict between drivers and firemen, but finally succeeded in 1886. In New South Wales it seems that an association was formed as early as 1871. By 1881 there were two bodies, one in Sydney and one in Goulburn, but both became dormant in that year.

The idea of amalgamating Locomotive Enginemen's Associations from all states was suggested at a Victorian Conference of 1886. Federation did not come to fruition until 1899-1900 when the Locomotive Engine Drivers & Firemen's Associations from Victoria, N.S.W., South Australia and Queensland met to form The Federated Railway Locomotive Enginemen's Associations of Australasia. The body met yearly at Conference, but did not set up a Federal Division until 1920. In that year a decision of the High Court made it possible for unions covering employees in state instrumentalities to have access to the Federal Arbitration Court. In February 1921, the newly named AFULE was the first such union to gain Federal registration with the Court.

In 1922-23, following Federal registration, successful steps were taken for the AFULE to gain coverage of Locomotive Enginemen working for Commonwealth railways, and the union became truly Australia wide.

HISTORICAL NOTE: In 1924, the Federal AFULE decided to file a separate log of claims on each of the state employers, but the decision of the Australian Railways Union to try to establish one federal award for all railwaymen precipitated the Locomotive Enginemen into a similar case before the Federal Arbitration Court. The AFULE presented a mass of detailed evidence resulting by 7 April 1925 in its first Federal Award binding on State instrumentalities and bringing its four Union Divisions into line industrially.

The AFULE affiliated to the ALP in 1923. Two members who were prominent in both the Union and Party were Ben Chifley from the N.S.W. AFULE, who was Prime Minister during the Second World War and post-war reconstruction, and Arthur Drakeford from Victoria. Drakeford was the first Federal Secretary of the AFULE and later, Cabinet Minister in the Curtin and Chifley governments.

NOTE ON

7 ARBITRATION

Arbitration material is organized according to date range of file. Date is determined by the year in which court proceedings take place. Some cases take place continually over a number of consecutive years - these are listed as composite dates e.g. 1928-1930. Some files contain more than one (related) case.

Many cases appear in a number of different files over a number of different years (e.g. when a case is closed and later re-opened or when it is an ongoing dispute). No attempt has been made to amalgamate these files.

The information provided for each file is dependent on the nature of the file and information available. I have included (where available):

- Name of file or subject of dispute (e.g. "44 hour case")
- case/dispute number
- Nature of material (e.g. transcript, exhibit, judgement; frequently one file contains different types of material)
- Protagonists in dispute (e.g. Victorian Railways Commission and A.F.U.L.E.); frequently a dispute includes more than one complainant and respondent and I have not listed all groups involved in case
- Date of court proceedings (day, month and year).
