HISTORICAL NOTE: Jack Hutson was born in England on 13 May 1912. A family tree in his papers (Series 2/1) indicates that he was the last of a long line of "Johns" in the Hutson family, but he was always known as Jack. He qualified as an engineer and worked as an engineer on the oil fields of Sarawak until evacuated to Australia during World War 11. Jack's developing political ideas led him to resign his managerial position and return to work as a tradesman. From that point on, his work as a trade unionist and member of the Communist Party became the primary focus of his life. It was through Jack's role in training and research for the Amalgamated Engineering Union (AEU) that his most substantial work for the union movement was done. He became one of the best-informed unionists on the Australian arbitration and wage fixing system, writing two important books: Penal Colony to Penal Powers (AEU, 1966) and Six Wage Concepts (AEU, 1971). Jack was instrumental in the union movement's planning of strategies for Australia's industrial reconstruction in the 1960s and 1970s. After retiring from the union, Jack worked for the Communist Party, Victorian Office and assumed significant responsibility for the party's financial affairs. In later years his work was focused on the Australian Society for the Study of Labour History (q.v.). He was Secretary of the Melbourne Branch for several years and edited the Recorder. Jack has been described as typifying the "mindful militants", the industrial activists in the engineering trades. He died on 21 February 2003. [from Obituary by Peter Love in Labour History No. 84, May 2003]

NOTE ON COLLECTION:		Most items in the Jack Hutson papers consist of files created and arranged by Jack Hutson by topic, and used as working files of research for his writing, or as training resources. Many of these files include handwritten notes by Hutson, and drafts of chapters of his publications. (Series 1 Research Files). This series also includes files reflecting Hutson's more personal interests in art, cinema, music and travel. Manuscript, drafts, reports and articles by Hutson are interleaved throughout these files; and a sequence of files contains handwritten drafts relating to Hutson's major publications, Six Wage Concepts and From Penal Colony to Penal Powers. The collection contains a small component of biographical items (Series 2: Jack Hutson - Biography), and photographs (Series 3: Photographs). Un sourced newspaper cuttings and printed material with no obvious context or relevance have been culled from the collection.
