HISTORICAL NOTE	Movement Against Uranium Mining (MAUM) commenced as a group c.1976 to lobby against uranium mining in Australia. They also acted as one point in a network of anti-nuclear organisations which included Nuclear Free Australia and Friends of the Earth (FOE) who all cooperated on joint campaigns. It was also an educational resource group for school and a general source of public information on Australian and international nuclear issues. The activities of the group were reduced to distributing information in 1994.

Movement Against Uranium Mining

Collection Summary

The Movement Against Uranium Mining (MAUM) was formed after a meeting of people concerned about the dangers that uranium mining creates to the people of Australia and the rest of the world ². The initial meeting was held in March 1976 ³. The people associated with the movement included church members, trade unionists, students, members of peace organisations, conservationists, medical practitioners, scientists and others. The first anti-nuclear marches were held in 1974⁴ and there had apparently been attempts to organise an anti-nuclear coalition previously.

MAUM initially shared its offices with FOE at 51 Nicholson St. Carlton but in 1977 moved to 277 Brunswick St. Fitzroy and in 1978 moved to 180 Brunswick St. Fitzroy. In 1982 it moved to 250 George St. Fitzroy (upstairs of St. Marks Community Centre) for a brief period, then in late 1982 moved to 285-287 Lt Lonsdale St. Melbourne. In August 1987 it moved to 247-251 Flinders Lane Melbourne where it stayed until it ceased operating in 1994. Although initially, there are some records of interstate branches ⁵ it seems that MAUM was operated, coordinated and run from Victoria. They had a fairly extensive Melbourne, inner-suburban network of branches as well as branches in country Victoria ⁶.

MAUM was just one of many groups in an anti-nuclear, pro-conservation network ⁷ and it is hard to work out where the jurisdiction of one ended and another started. In fact members of MAUM weren't sure of the distinction themselves ⁸. Apparently MAUM was primarily concerned with uranium mining and issues directly arising from this such as Aboriginal land rights. This appears to differentiate it from PND and conservation groups like Greenpeace although the distinction is vague since MAUM also concerned itself with the use of uranium as a nuclear fuel, either to generate electricity or for use in nuclear weapons ⁹.

Some of the principle people involved with MAUM were Dr. Joe Camilleri and his wife, Les Dalton, John Speight, Sue Hetherington, Jean Melzer, Glenn Foard, Mo Dunn. Several people were paid employees of MAUM over the period of its existence ¹⁰ and others appear to have been paid for set short-terms. However, it seems that volunteers did most of the work. MAUM's activities were coordinated by a Steering Committee and minutes were recorded of Steering Committee meetings ¹¹. In 1977 a General Policy Committee was set up ¹² and minutes of these meetings were also kept ¹³. There were also other type of meetings and minutes of these meetings were also recorded ¹⁴. Furthermore, the files of the various activities carried out by MAUM also contain minutes of the committees that organised the activity.

MAUM corresponded with many local, interstate and overseas organisations. These included political parties, allied coalition groups, churches, unions, and other relevant associations. They also answered requests for information from students, teachers, the business community and the general public ¹⁵. Incoming correspondence from specific sources, for example political parties was sorted by subject type and date. General incoming correspondence was sorted by date, (missing 1981). Requests were sorted by year. Outgoing correspondence was arranged in chronological order. However, early outgoing correspondence 1976 to 1981 does not appear to have been saved. In addition, many of the activity files such as the coordination and setting up of nuclear free zones and MAUM's involvement in election campaigns, also contain correspondence specific to that activity.

MAUM organised and participated in many activities. These included organising tours of guest speakers, actions at shareholders' meetings, anti-French campaigns, petitions, rallies, marches, dockside demonstrations against nuclear powered and nuclear weapon carrying warships, bike rides and action at the Roxby Downs and Honeymoon uranium mines. They campaigned in Federal and State elections for those politicians and parties taking the anti-nuclear stance. They were actively involved in the Peace Expo of 1985 and the International Year of Peace in 1986¹⁶. They also helped with the setting up of nuclear free zones, assisting local councils ¹⁷. At a number of these activities posters and banners were made and displayed and photographs taken of the event ¹⁸. The files of these activities often contained relevant correspondence, minutes of meetings, newsclippings, published reports, newsletters, posters and other ephemera. The records of these activities were not stored or arranged in any particular order.

MAUM issued publicity statements, press releases and generally tried to influence public opinion on the whole nuclear debate. For most of their big campaigns ie the Roxby blockade they called press conferences, issued press releases and sent out telegrams/telexes to all media: print, radio and television¹⁹. They published newsletters and leaflets in English and other languages²⁰. They ran a very successful radio show on 3CR from 1977 to 1994, "The Radio Active Show"²¹. They corresponded with political parties in an attempt to force the anti-uranium argument onto political agendas of the parties²². They had badges and stickers made up which they sold at rallies, demonstration and through the mail²³.

MAUM acted as a repository of anti-nuclear information. They kept information files on all the major nuclear accidents and disasters such as Hiroshima, Sellafield, Three Mile Island and Chernobyl. They also kept files on the British nuclear tests held in Australia as well as the nuclear testing programs of France and China. They had information on mineral sands mining, Mordechai Vanunu, Karen Silkwood, food irradiation, the possibility of a nuclear power station for Victoria and nuclear wastes. They held copies of the Ranger Uranium Environmental Enquiry reports. They collected books, booklets, newspaper clippings, reprints from scientific and other journals and newsletters published by other anti-nuclear organisations²⁴. These appear to have been arranged by subject in filing cabinets. Supposedly there were two filing cabinets: one for Australian information (filing cabinet 4, Series ID0006) and one for overseas information (filing cabinet 3, Series ID0007). However, the Australian information included some overseas information²⁵ and the overseas information included some Australian information²⁶.

MAUM raised funds through many different activities. Primarily they relied on subscriptions and donations from their members²⁷. However, they also received donations from trade unions, local councils and branches of the ALP²⁸. They sold badges and stickers²⁹, raffle tickets³⁰, organised fairs³¹, a 10th anniversary dinner³², applied for grants³³ and even ran a stall at the Royal Melbourne Show³⁴.

MAUM seems to have ceased operation in mid 1994. The last inwards correspondence was dated May 1994, and the final outwards correspondence dated 7 June 1994 details the scaling down of MAUM's operations at Flinders Lane. Reasons given for this include: dwindling financial resources and a lack of commitment from long-standing volunteers³⁵. At about the same time Sue Fairbanks from Melbourne University Archives visited MAUM to try to gain an impression of the records and functions of MAUM to base her appraisal upon. Les Dalton and Eric Miller packed the records into boxes although apparently some records were culled³⁶. There were seventeen boxes of records, books and artefacts. However, only the first twelve of those arrived at ASAP on 1st July 1996. The final five boxes contained videos, slides and assorted posters.

The records series were designed by Sue Fairbanks and I followed her design fairly accurately. I did not know the original order of the records and had to assume that they had been boxed in the original order. Even so, I found a number of inconsistencies with the records. Some of the record that were claimed to be present I could not find. The Helen Caldicott Petition 1977 file from box 3 was empty. Furthermore, there were records in box 6 that had not been catalogued³⁷. These I made into a separate series (Series ID0015) and some of the records of box 5 also went into that series. I also separated newsletters and press releases published by MAUM from newsletters and press releases collected by MAUM and made a new series for those records. Records of accounts and records of 'office information' (diaries and logbooks) made up two more series. Series ID0006 and Series ID0007 intermingled Australian and overseas information files^{25, 26} and included some activities rather than just information files³⁸. If I had to do the job again I would probably divide Series ID0005 into two separate series. One of these series would deal with just with activities organised by MAUM. The other one would deal with MAUM's membership and the local MAUM groups³⁹. Series ID0005 also contained some purely information files⁴⁰.

MAUM was a service organisation run mainly by volunteers with a few paid staff. Its major aim was to influence public opinion on uranium mining. Its committees organised big activities designed to keep the issues in the public eye. It also acted as an information provider for the public and a lobby group to the political parties. The records that have been kept, capture evidence of MAUM in all of these functions.

Ultimately MAUM was successful. Uranium mining never developed into the huge industry that it had the potential to be. There were never more than three uranium mines operating in Australia at any one time. Australia never developed a nuclear weapons capability and still has not built a nuclear power station. The rallies that MAUM organised attracted thousands of participants and always gained the attention of the media. School children from around the country knew of MAUM and wrote to them requesting information and badges ⁴¹. MAUM helped to coordinate local government on setting up of nuclear free zones ⁴². At the grass roots level, the business level and at the government level MAUM was able to make itself heard. It entered into the collective consciousness of Australia: the anti-nuclear symbol and the smiling sun were immediately recognisable, the badges with "uranium? no thanks" and "stop uranium mining"⁴³ were seen everywhere and the slogans "solar not nuclear"⁴⁴ and "land rights not uranium"⁴⁵ were catch-cries at all the rallies. The collection of MAUM records serve as a reminder of how a small organisation with defined aims and activities can affect large institutions, influence community awareness, community sentiment and community opinions and therefore bring about social change.

Series: 0001 Minutes of MAUM meetings.

Summary: Involves the records of minutes from the Steering committee meetings, Action group meetings, general policy committee meetings, office staff meetings, volunteer staff meetings and general meetings. However, many other inventory files contain minutes of various meetings amongst the other records. Records of activities organised by MAUM (Series ID 5) would often contain the minutes of meetings for the carrying out of the activities.
