National Mutual expanded across Australia throughout the early 1900's and amalgamated with many smaller mutual societies. By 1983 National Mutual merged with a large well known insurance company called T & G Mutual Life Society. After this significant merger the company expanded throughout the Asia Pacific region acquiring companies within Singapore, Thailand and the Philippines. In 1999 the company changed its name to AXA Asia Pacific Holdings. It specialises in life insurance, superannuation, funds management and income protection. The multiple businesses that were operating collectively with National Mutual at the time also altered their company names to incorporate the AXA brand.

NOTE ON COLLECTIONS	Original control number: NMLS 4. This series of bound volumes contains copies of non confidential letters between the Association's Head Office and its Queensland Branch. Subjects covered included investments, funds, income tax, building societies, Branch returns, accounts returns, staff, freehold property, home purchase loans, loans on mortgage, loan on reversionary interest and loan on life interest, land tax, fire insurance, actuarial matters, group assurance schemes, underwriting -special enquiries, proposals, war risks, annual meetings and miscellaneous subjects. Until 1st January 1939 the volumes also included copies of letters on departmental and routine matters as acknowledgements of memoranda, advice of the despatch of returns and other routine documents to Head Office and other matters of a similar nature. The difference between letters and routine memoranda was implemented in all branches with the exception of the England, South Africa and Ceylon Branches which continued the previous practice for some time. There are various systems of arrangement discernible within the series. Initially until 1914, letters 'to' and 'from' .Head Office were held in separate sequences and a volume might contain correspondence covering a period greater than a year. From 1914 the practices of having more than one year's correspondence in a volume and having separate sequences of inwards and outwards letters were discontinued. From 1914 until 1939 the inwards and outwards letters were held in yearly volumes, one for inwards and one for outwards, and placed next to each other; these volumes were differentiated by an 'I' for inwards and 'O' for outwards on the spine. In 1939 the change of subject matter of the correspondence in the volumes, which was described above, took place. With this change letters in the volumes were grouped by the subjects with which they dealt. This practice meant that inwards and outwards letters on the same subject were interfiled. At the start of each volume two indexes were constructed, one for inwards and the other for outwards. These indexes gave details of letter number, subject and file number. The file number referred to a number either written or stamped on the top right hand corner of an item of correspondence. The contents of the volume were then arranged in the file number order. Thus, letter L39/1 to a Branch would not necessarily be the first folio in the volume but may appear at, say, file 137. This may be followed by several letters to and from the Branch on the subject each of which belongs to the same file. This system continued until 1956 when inwards and outwards letters were again filed chronologically and the subject grouping abandoned. From 1963, 'Inwards' and 'Outwards' were again placed in separate volumes. Before 1879 letters marked 'private' appear in the letter books. Indexes to the earlier volumes of outwards letters were maintained and there is evidence of top numbering.
