"The Labor party is not, and never has been, opposed to the representation of Australia at the Imperial Conference, but considers that decisions affecting the Commonwealth should be submitted to the Federal Parliament for ratification, and the delegates going should be instructed to oppose any curtailment of the powers of self-government that are now enjoyed by the people of Australia. (Cheers.) The proposed representatives, the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes), Sir William Irvine, and Sir John Forrest, certainly did not represent Australian opinions on many matters. (Voices: `Rats!') One of the stock arguments of our opponents to-day is that we are not Australian-born, but he might prove as anti-Australian as the others. These three gentlemen were strongly in favor of conscription, and yet this question was defeated on October 28. Surely, then, it must be admitted that they were not true representatives of the Commonwealth. The delegate or delegates who go should represent the views of the majority of the people.

THE LABOR CAUCUS.

"The Labor movement to-day is no different to what it was, except that some members have left the party. (Voices: `Rats!'"") One of the skilful arguments of our opponents to-day is that we are dictated to from outside bodies, and are responsible to them for our actions. That statement is not true. (A Voice: `Whizz!') During the 16 years that I have been in the Federal Parliament I have never been dictated to as to how I should vote, upon any particular measure that was brought before Parliament. The men in the Parliamentary Labor party to-day are in exactly the same position as those who have been in since the present Labor party was brought into existence.

"I moved in the House for a Commission to inquire into this matter, and the Prime Minister, in his reply, stated:--"If honorable members desire a Royal Commission, or any inquiry into the matter in God's name, let them have it." (Hansard, p. 953.)"
