The following charm was found with the body of a woman named Hudson, whose husband, Benjamin Hudson, was found guilty at Derby, July 15, 1873, of murdering her—

To not these pins I mean to burn,
But Ben Hudson's head I mean to turn.
Let him neither eat, drink, nor comfort find,
Till he comes to me and speaks his mind.

If a woman were as little as their foot,
A peace and calm makes her a firm and a hood.

Meadow should be mild and meek,
Swift to hear, and slow to speak.

The wife that expects to have a good name
Is always at home as if she were lame;
And the maid that is unused her leisure delight,
Is still to be done from morning to night.
Many men have many minds,
But women have but one;
Everything is what they'd have,
And nothing will they do.

My son's a son till he hath got him a wife,
But my daughter a daughter all the days of her life.

Follow love and it will flee,
Flee love and it will follow thee.
