Archives Digitised Collections

Creator(s)
Greer, Germaine (1939-)

Title
Soul - prejudice - Love (see over)

Date
1968-1970

Description
item: 2014.0039.0457

Terms and Conditions
Copyright owned by University of Melbourne. For information about ordering a copy of this image contact the University of Melbourne Archives: archives@archives.unimelb.edu.au

Preferred Citation
University of Melbourne Archives, Greer, Germaine (1939-), Soul - prejudice - Love (see over), 2014.0039.0457
One need only look at a woman's shape to discover that she is not intended for too much physical, mental or too much physical work. She pays the debt of life not by what she does, but by what she suffers...
The greatest sorrows and joys of great feats of strength are not assigned to her... They themselves are childish, foolish, and short-sighted; in a word, are big children all their lives... just as the female ant, after coitus, loses her wings which then become superfluous, nay, dangerous for breeding purposes.
So, for the most part, does a woman lose her beauty after giving birth to one or two children, and probably for the same reason...

Man reaches the maturity of his reasoning and mental faculties scarcely before he is twenty-eight.
Woman when she is 18, but her is reason I very narrow limitations. This is why woman remain children all their lives; see only what is near-at-hand, cling to the present, take the appearance of a thing for reality and prefer trifling matters to the most important.

Their way of grasping a thing is quite different from ours, because they like the shortest way to a point and usually keep their attention fixed upon what lies nearest, while we as a rule, see beyond it just because it lies under our nose...

Because women really exist only for the propagation of the race, and their destiny ends there, they live more for the species than the individual, and in their hearts take the affairs of the species more seriously than those of the individual. This gives to their whole being and character a certain frivolity and altogether a certain tendency which is fundamentally different from that of man, and it is this which gives rise to that discord in married life which is so prevalent and almost the normal state.