Mrs. Egrep

Sir

I regret extremely that I cannot find the letters both of Abbess by A. C. Whatever it has been so, nor any mistake. I cannot ascertain, but if it should turn of Anthon in Genevile concerning Eccles. 26. 1640.

Frome even look into the question of the translation of Boccaccio's English of his 1626-28 who it was done by. It is dedicated to the Earl of Pembroke. The translator has taken some liberty editing with the original

I am not certain which. I think I found pretty good evidence in the dedication before I tried to rejoin it to Dassier. This appears to have been a more voluminous translation than he has hitherto been considered to do. I knew his work of Davel's troubles of Hungary. I know it by the following entry:

A History of the Creation of man termed the Ecclesi.

By Dr. Henry Selden, Knight
also by Eustace de Richd. Frome, Esquire.

I have borrowed the Genevile Please to return it soon as I might undertake the work of

Your obedient serv. Tho. 1741.
