HISTORICAL NOTE:	Jigsaw was a self-help organisation that came into being in the 1970s with the aim of changing public perception and the law in order to provide people who had been part of the adoption system with the right to access their personal information surrounding the experience. Rona Devlin was the first to speak out in 1975, seeking publicity opportunities for recruiting members and initiating a public debate about access to birth records for adult adoptees. She named the fledgling organization the Adoptees' Liberty Movement Association (ALMA) after an earlier organization founded in New York in the 1960s. A New South Wales group, using the name Jigsaw, emerged about the same time and the Victorian and NSW groups combined forces in 1976, operating under the name Jigsaw. The active operation developed after the first Australian Conference on Adoption, organised by several adoption agencies in February 1976, and by 1984 Jigsaw had grown to over 12,000 members. Within eight years Jigsaw had succeeded in changing the public attitude about access to birth records for adult adoptees from hostility to widespread support and approval. The amending of the Adoption Act in 1984 enacted what Jigsaw had campaigned for. Its aim essentially complete, the organisation wound up in 1986. The Jigsaw Trust, made up of the Life Members of Jigsaw, was established in 1987 to administer residual matters and funds and continued until c. 2000 when the remaining funds were allocated to various organizations. Robert Bender, the Founding President of Jigsaw (1976-1981) described the amendment of the Adoption Act as "an instance of a very successful campaign to achieve significant social change, by what started as a small, amateur organization, which by its closure in 1985 had become a very effective force of experienced campaigners. During the campaign and since, many thousands of adult adoptees were enabled to access information about their origins, which has led to a major improvement in their lives, and in the general openness and honesty with which family arrangements are now made…"

NOTE ON COLLECTIONS:		The record keeping structure appears to have been generally decentralized and Jigsaw records were created and maintained by various office holders and members of the Jigsaw Executive. File creators included Jigsaw Secretaries, Presidents and Vice-Presidents, and "File holders", who maintained search files. Many records transferred to UMA came from Robert Bender, Founding President, 1976-198, and the majority from David Hirt (1937-2005), President, 1982-1986. As the Jigsaw Trust wound up in the 1990s, the Archive contains the complete record of the organization, apart from most of the search files, containing client information, which have been transferred to the Dept. of Human Services, Adoption Records. Note also that some records created by David Hirt in the course of his post-Jigsaw work have been retained within the Jigsaw collection. Hirt's membership of organizations including VANISH, his work as a consultant to the Victorian government in 1988-1989 on the Adoption Information Service Review, and his ongoing involvements in issues such as surrogacy, were considered to continue the adoption reform interests of Jigsaw.
NOTE ON LISTING:		As there was no apparent official record keeping system for the bulk of the records, many series have been listed under the names of Office Holders, and series and item numbers have been imposed to assist researchers. All relevant contextual information has been retained. In order to preserve provenance, the name of the person who donated the records has been given in the item description (eg. [Hirt]). This is because some of the records have been bundled together in a single series. Note also that many of David Hirt's papers have been kept in separate series in order to preserve provenance where possible.

	27	David Hirt, Post Jigsaw Files. Adoption Information Service (A.I.S.) Redevelopment. David Hirt Consultancy. David Hirt was employed as a Ministerial Consultant (trading as Episkopos Consultants Pty. Ltd.) to Minister for Community Services Peter Spyker in 1989 to advise the Minister on policies and measures re A.I.S. Hirt produced a Ministerial Report on the A.I.S. The files contain many drafts of the report, with annotations by DH, and are somewhat disordered. Publications which appear to relate to Hirt's consultancy are retained here, but publications which appeared to be estrays (eg. Concerned United Birthparents (CUB)) have been relocated to publications, non Jigsaw series. [Hirt]
